ALEXANDER.

Dr. Isaac Alexander was of a distinguished North Carolina family. His father, Abraham Alexander, enjoyed the honor of presiding over the famous Mecklenburg Convention of 1775, at Charlotte. The family had migrated to North Carolina from Cecil County, Md., in the early part of the 18th century. Dr. Isaac Alexander graduated from Princeton College in 1772, in the same class with James Madison and Aaron Burr. On his return to Charlotte, he entered upon the practice of medicine, and served for one year as first President of Queen's Museum. He removed to Camden about 1784, where, for nearly 30 years, he was a leading physician and citizen. He had been a surgeon in the American army during the Revolution, and was a participant in the disastrous defeat of Gates at Camden, rendering important aid to the wounded and attending the Baron DeKalb in his mortal illness. Although not an office-seeker, Dr. Alexander was called upon to do public service. He represented the county in the Legislature in 1786, was Intendant of Camden, and served as one of the first Trustees of the South Carolina College. He was also for many years an elder in the Presbyterian Church. He died in 1812, and is buried in the Presbyterian graveyard.

Dr. Alexander's first wife was Margaret, daughter of Dr. William Brisbane, of Charleston. This excellent woman, one of the builders of the first Presbyterian Church erected in Camden after the Revolution, died in 1801, at the age of 44. She left one child, Amelia, who married Wm. Adamson, Esq.

His second wife was Sarah Thornton, of New York, a sister of Phineas Thornton. This marriage took place in 1807. Of it there were two children, Isaac B. Alexander, who died in 1885, at the age of 73, leaving a large family; and Henry Dana Ward Alexander, who married his cousin, Mary Alexander, of North Carolina, removed to Georgia, served in the western army, C. S. A., and lost his life in a steamer burned on the Savannah River in 1865.

Isaac B. Alexander married Miss Gilman of Camden. He is remembered as an excellent citizen, of considerable talent as a painter of miniatures on ivory, and interested in scientific investigations, though his business was that of a jeweler.
