crossing Floyd's Branch ...

Whereas James Pendleton, John Coleman and John Floyd each purchased of Edward Teele some land which he purchased of George Hume, deceased, part of the Fox Mountain Tract and believing there was a considerable quantity of land within the bounds of the patent by which Hume held the same it was mutually agreed by Pendleton, Coleman and Floyd that James Pendleton should apply to the Proprietor's Office for a warrant to resurvey the same and obtain a deed therefrom in his own name, who promised to convey to them their respective parts. James Pendleton obtained a warrant directed to Philip Clayton who surveyed and returned the plat with the composition and deed money to the office, but before a deed could be obtained Coleman sold his dividend to John Wright, and George William Fairfax, Esqr., who kept the office at that time and then removed to Great Britain, and John Martin, Esqr., succeeded him in the office soon after James Pendleton departed this life and by his last will 20 Dec. 1762 directed that his son should convey to John Wright and John Floyd their respective parts of the land.

Henry Pendleton hath been obliged to reenter the same and obtained a deed from the Office for 395 acres 29 Jan. 1767 in his own name.
