Sir George Yearley was one of the ablest and most popular of Virginia's Colonial Governors. His public acts are matters of history, and many of them have been published and commented upon in a number of historical magazines. Sir George Yearley came to Virginia in the "Deliverance" in 1609 (see Hotten's lists). He was a member of the Virginia Company of that year and became Deputy Governor of Virginia, 1616-17. He returned to England in 1618, and in the latter part of that year was knighted and appointed Governor of Virginia, returning to the colony in 1619. He summoned the first Legislative Assembly ever held in Virginia. He was a member of the Council in 1625 and was again appointed Governor in 1626, which office he held until his death, November, 1627.

Sir George Yearley owned three thousand, seven hundred acres of land at Hungar's Creek, Northampton County, Eastern Shore of Virginia, and this land is still known as Yearley. (Now owned by Dr. Griffin W. Holland, of Eastville, Virginia.)

Governor Yearley's wife was Temperance Flowerdew, dau—of Anthony and Martha Flowerdew of County Norfolk, Eng. After Sir George's death, she m—Capt. Francis West, Gov. of Virginia, 1627-29, youngest son of Thomas West, 2nd Lord de la Warr, and Ann Knollys; who was the daughter of Sir Francis Knollys, Knight of the Garter.

In the Virginia Historical Magazine are to be found copies of some autographed letters of Sir George Yearley, written to Edwin Sandys, then at the head of the great Virginia Company in London, which prove interesting reading. These letters are taken from the original, still extant in Magdalen College, Cambridge, Eng. Sir George Yearley is considered one of the most remarkable men who were prominently connected with the early government of Virginia under James I. Prince George's County is an old and important county in the development of the Colony of Maryland. In 1696 the upper portions were taken from Calvert and Charles County to form this new county which included all of Western Maryland. By 1748 settlement of the western lands was sufficient to make feasible the formation of Frederick County from portions of Prince George's and Baltimore. In 1776 Montgomery County was cut from the south-eastern portion of Frederick County while Washington County was taken from the north-western part. Washington County was then divided in 1789 to form Allegany County and in 1837 Carroll County was formed from portions of Baltimore and Frederick County. In 1872 the last county to be established in Maryland was taken from the western portion of Allegany and called Garrett County. Thus for 52 years most of the land now belonging to these counties was called Prince George's County. In the 1702-1709 period covered by these records there were few plantations located west of the present-day Montgomery County line, while the area of present-day Prince George's County was so well settled that land was being re-surveyed to correct boundaries.

These land records are a valuable resource for genealogists researching Prince George's and surrounding counties. They consist mainly of deeds which show the name of the seller's wife (if any), show her maiden name if the plantation came through her family, and occasionally include the name of the buyer's wife. Sometimes they include the names of children, siblings and other relatives. Many persons from Calvert, Charles, Anne Arundel, Baltimore and St. Mary's Counties bought and sold land recorded in the records during this period as well as Virginians and Englishmen. Merchants and mariners of England and Scotland recorded letters of Attorney and deeds. There are several leases and deeds of gift of both land and slaves. Oaths of allegiance for the representatives of Queen Ann were recorded.

The spelling of persons, plantations, and landmarks was not consistent, even in the same document. The scribe who wrote the majority of the records consistently spelled field with the letter e before the letter i and his spelling was copied throughout this book. For the most part the spelling is presented in this volume as it appeared on the microfilm, but in some cases it was modernized where it could make no difference to the researcher. Example: Edinburgh instead of Edinborough. Some of the archaic spelling and peculiar phrasing was included in parenthesis to add interest and color to this book and some was used without parenthesis added. The folio numbering is duplicated in some instances on the original documents, but, since indexing is according to book page number, this should not cause confusion for the researcher.

The English pound sterling was the currency of the Colony. For simplicity this has been presented as £/s/p (pound/shilling/pence) with the numerical figure before the symbol (example: 10£/2s/4p). The survey measurement was a perch which is the equivalent of a present day rod, 5 1/2 yards or 16 1/2 feet. Since both the Julian calendar, which began the new year on March 25th, and the Gregorian calendar, which starts the new year on January 1st, were used, some documents show both dates written, for example, as 1702/3.

In 1699 the Court House and Church Yard were laid out in Charles Towne. In 1707 the first lots were recorded in Charles Towne Court Records for the town of Marlboro. The plat of the Court House and Church Yard of Charles Towne was recorded along with several other plots in the latter part of the Court Records. These interesting drawings have been meticulously copied and included, but it was not possible to copy them to scale working from the microfilm.

It has been my pleasure to abstract this material for publication, and it is my hope that this book will be of value to those interested in the land and the stout-hearted people who settled and developed Prince George's County and the Colony of Maryland.

In 1619, a year marked by several important events in the Colony, including the assembling of the first General Assembly, the London Company adopted a "Cote for Virginia". The coat-of-arms has been a puzzle and source of speculation to every historian and has been sometimes confused with the proper seal of the Colony itself. It is found as a book plate or frontispiece in nearly all of the printed acts and official proceedings of the Colonial government. It appears in Smith's Generall Historie of Virginia, editions 1624 and 1632; in Beverley's History of Virginia, in several issues of the Virginia Gazette, and in Stow's Survey of London, published in 1633. It was changed slightly from time to time to make the quarterings agree with the arms of the different reigning houses, and after the union of England and Scotland "quartam" succeeded "quintum" in the motto. The illustration is from the title page of Merchants of Virginia in the Virginia State Library.
