MISCELLANEOUS NOTES ON HAWKINS COUNTY

This county took its name from Benjamine Hawkins, who as United States Senator, conjointly with Senator Samuel Johnston, who on 25 Feb. 1790, executed the deed which transferred what is now Tennessee to the United States.

The early settlers of this county were largely from North Carolina and Virginia. A few Pennsylvania and New England natives came here. Among those first settlers were some families which are still among the leading families of the county. Some of these families were: Amis, Mulkey, Carter, Parker, Love, Kinkeads, Longs, Gillenwaters, Lucas, Parsons, Bradley, McKinney, Miller, Powell, McMinn, Cocks, Rogers, and Armstrong.

In the early days of the state, no county contributed more to the education of its population than did Hawkins County. Some of the early notable teachers were: John Long, 1783; William Evans, 1784; James King, 1786; Samuel B. Hawkins, 1796.

Rogersville, the county seat, was named in honor of Joseph Rogers, one of the early settlers.

The first will recorded in Hawkins County was that of Thomas Amis, 6 Nov. 1797. This will is on the first page of the first will book. There may be other wills but they were not recorded in the probate books, and if existing may be among the rapidly deteriorating old papers scattered in the four corners of the ancient courthouse.

The will of Thomas Amis, dated 6 Nov. 1797, names his wife wife Lucy, children John, Willis, Thomas Gale, Haynes, Tabitha, and Mary. John Ray, Esq., Col. James Armstrong, Wm. Armstrong, Esq., Joseph McMinn, Esq., and Wm. Howard, Surveyor, were requested to divide the estate.

The next will recorded in the county is that of William Amis, dated Dec. 1809, on p. 3.

William Armstrong's will, dated 17 Feb. 1810, but probated in 1809 (sic) is also on p. 3. He names his wife Abinah Armstrong.

The will of John Armstrong, dated 17 April 1813, and proved in 1813, on p. 4, names wife Jane, "plantation in Carter's Valley," daughter Jane Armstrong, son Thomas, daughter Amos Baker, daughter Mary Armstrong, and son Baker. Thomas Armstrong and John Young were to be executors.

Other early wills included those of of:

William Armstrong, dated 10 May 1817, p. 6.

Lucy Amis, dated 17 Dec. 1818, p. 6.

David Anderson, 1822, p. 7.

Deborah Alexander, 1827, p. 8.

William Armstrong, Sr., 1835, p. 8.

Haynes Amis, 1847, p. 13.

NOTES ON HENRY COUNTY

Henry County was erected on 7 Nov. 1821, and named in honor of Patrick Henry. It was taken from the Western District.

John B. House was the first settler in 1819. Among the other early settlers were: Joel and Willis Hagler, Alex Harmon, John Young, James and David D. Greer, Samuel McCorkle, Johannon Smith, William Walters, Rev. Benjamine Reoples, Rev. John Mauly, Abraham Walters, William Porter, Thomas Grey, Adam Rome, and others.

The first court was held on Monday, December, 1821, at the home of Peter Wall.

The county seat of Paris was laid out by commissioners in 1823. Joseph Blythe and Peter Ruff were the commissioners selected by the Legislature.

Henry County is not an old county, but it is a progressive one. Paris is a thriving town as well as the county seat. The records of the county are preserved but are not classified or arranged in any degree of system, many being original papers tied in packages.

The county is bounded on the north by Kentucky, on the west by Weakley County, Tennessee; on the south by Carroll County, Tennessee; on the southeast and east by Benton County and Stewart County. The Tennessee River divides this county from Stewart on the east, and is spanned by a handsome new bridge erected by the State in 1932.

1 Jan. 1812. Joseph Braden of Williamson Co., Tenn.; 75 acres on Fountain Creek; Samuel Gregg of Maury Co., Tenn. (99)

Samuel Ellis, private in the Revolutionary War in the N. C. Militia, was pensioned in Adair Co., Ky. He was born 9 April 1762 in Montgomery Co., Md.; entered service in Rowan Co., N. C. and lived there for three years after the war. He moved to Surry Co., N. C., then back to Rowan Co., and in a few years to Burke Co., then to Jefferson Co., Tenn., until 1826 when he moved to Cumberland Co., Ky., where he lived until 1832, when he settled in Russell County, Kentucky, where his wife died. He had a son and two daughters. His pension began 4 March 1831.

Etheridge

Emerson Etheridge was born in Currituck Co., N. C., in Oct. 1819. His father was a farmer and migrated to Weakley Co., Tenn. from N. C., about 1821.

Ezell

Margaret Ezell died 1874, about 86 years old. She is buried in the Ezell graveyard near Buchanan's Creek in Giles Co., Tenn. She died at Milton Buchanan's in Lincoln. Her husband was W. M. Ezell. The graveyard is on the edge of Pulaski, Giles Co. Tenn. Other graves are there also.

Gilliland

James Gilliland of East Tennessee married first a Miss Painbow and second a Miss Cable. James had a brother Hamilton Gilliland who lived and died in White Rock, Tenn. Another brother, David Gilliland, went to Alabama.

John Gilliland was on the first grand jury of Jefferson Co., Tenn., in 1792.

John Gilliland was a member of the Convention held at Greenville, Tenn., with Jno. Sevier and Jno. Tipton.

Abel Gilliland settled on Wolf Creek about five miles from Pell City, Alabama. He had two sons, Patrick and Wesley Gilliland. A Methodist Church was erected on the land occupied by Gilliland or Gilliland. The church has been discarded and the membership moved to Eden, some three miles away. There was an old graveyard at the church, which has not been used for some fifty years, and is badly neglected. Wesley Gilliland is said to have moved to Texas. Abel Gilliland was from East Tennessee.

James Gilliland lived on what is known as the fork of Pegeon River and was prominent in the early history of Cocke Co., Tenn. His family intermarried with the Axley family. They also intermarried with the family of Peter Huff who lived on the French Broad River.

In the Davidson Co., Tenn., records, Will Books 1 and 2, pages 188, 200, 201, 345, and 346, are mentions of James Gilliland. 23 Aug. 1800, James Gilliland names his family, Robert, Daniel, James, and wife Nancy. James was the youngest son, and a daughter Sarah would be 21 years old in 1800.

One James Gilliland was a leader in the Zion Church. His wife was a sister of Jas. Axley and an excellent woman. This is the Cocke Co., Tenn., Gilliland family. Abel Gilliland, a brother of James, was a remarkable man. In 1821 he moved to Wolfe Creek, St. Clair Co., Alabama, and founded a church at that place. Before he left Cocke Co., he gave land between French Broad and Pigeon Rivers one mile west of Newport for the erection of a church.

John Gilliland was granted land in Greene Co., on French Broad, an island in Warford.

Silas Jasper Gilliland was in the early history of Tenn.
